The Importance of Regular Eye Tests for Your Child

As parents, we want to give our children every opportunity to thrive, and good vision plays a vital role in their learning and development. That's why regular eye tests are so important.

At school, we offer all children a vision screening in their Reception year, which helps identify any early concerns. However, a child's eyesight can change as they grow, so it's essential to have regular check-ups at the opticians. Optometrists do much more than just checking for glasses—they also assess overall eye health, looking for conditions that might not have obvious symptoms. Early detection can make a big difference in preventing long-term vision problems.

The good news is that sight tests are free for all children under 16, and if your child needs glasses, there is financial support available, meaning they could get them at no cost to you.

Booking an appointment with an optician is simple and could have a huge impact on your child's confidence, education, and well-being. Don't wait until they struggle—make regular eye tests a part of their healthcare routine.

Mental Health Awareness Week: 12th-18th May, 2025

This year, Mental Health Awareness's theme of "Community" invites us to celebrate and acknowledge the importance of community. With the high cost of living affecting families across the UK, stress and burnout becoming widespread, and millions of young people seeking mental health support, the importance of connection has never been greater.

Some of the many benefits of community include:

Social support: Having someone to talk to during tough times.

Purpose: Finding something bigger than yourself that motivates you to start your day.

Hope: Being surrounded by people who believe in you and help you believe in yourself.

Inspiration: Witnessing people who resemble you achieve great things, reminding you that you can too.

Cultural connection: Feeling affirmed by being with people who share your diagnosis, race, orientation, language, socio-economic background, or all of the above.

Resources: Having community members step in to help when you're struggling.

What Activities will you do to increase connection to your community?

May is Living Streets' National Walking Month!

Walking is a simple way to boost our health and stay engaged with our community, reducing feelings of loneliness and isolation.

The #Try20 tips (Visit our #Try20 page and download a free challenge checklist!) are designed to help you incorporate 20 minutes of walking into your daily routine and are available year-round. When you walk more, you're likely to feel healthier and happier as a result.

Dying Matters

Death and dying is a sensitive topic that is often difficult to talk about. Yet is a universal experience.

The mission of Dying Matters is to break down this stigma and taboo of talking about death and dying.

Different cultures and religions have unique ways of dealing with death and mourning. However, the emotions tied to dying and grief are universal, shared by everyone regardless of their background. The loss of a loved one affects each person uniquely, but research indicates that the brain's response to grief does not vary by race, age, or religion. We all experience feelings of loss, helplessness, and sadness, though we express and cope with these emotions in diverse ways.

Children and young people impacted by the loss of a family member can self-refer to SeeSaw.

SeeSaw provides assistance to families dealing with the terminal illness or death of a parent, carer, or sibling. They also extend their support to schools and professionals who work with children and young people in Oxfordshire.

CAMHS: Neurodiversity Support and "Walking With You" Oxfordshire

Neurodiversity Support: We know that families waiting for assessment and diagnosis of Autism, ADHD and other neurodevelopmental conditions can feel at a loss for how to support their child who is often experiencing distressing behaviours.

It is important to understand that diagnosis does not offer a cure or immediately alter the experiences of the young person or their family.

Parenting a neurodiverse child/young person may require new parenting skills and strategies and these can be learnt now with the support of peer/parent/carer-led support groups such as: CAMHS Supportive Steps online coffee mornings and "Walk With You" forum as well as national organisations such as:

- The National Autistic Society www.autism.org.uk
- ADHD Foundation www.adhdfoundation.org.uk

Oxfordshire Walking With You Forum - parent-led group for anyone caring for children and young people facing mental health challenges.

See the WWY Oxfordshire webpage, here.

Weekly online coffee mornings from Wednesday 30th April 11am - 12.30pm. They have 10 spaces available at each of the, please click here to book a date that works well for you.

Smartphones and Social Media - keeping our children safe.

YOUNGMINDS

Smartphones and social media are integral to many young people's lives, offering opportunities for learning, connection, and entertainment.

However, it's crucial to ensure their use supports mental health and well-being. Regular, open conversations between parents and children about online activities can help navigate the digital world safely.

Leading by example, discussing both positive and negative online experiences, and setting realistic boundaries are effective strategies.

Understanding and discussing the apps and websites your child uses can also foster trust and awareness.

By maintaining open communication and mutual respect, families can promote a balanced and safe approach to smartphone and social media use. For more information and advice: Social Media & Mental Health | Guide For Parents | YoungMinds

Exam stress

Please see the below advice from Childline:

WORRYING ABOUT EXAMS

Exam stress can affect anyone and can happen for lots of different reasons. You might be worried about doing enough revision, getting the grades you need or be feeling pressure from your school or family. It can seem like nobody else is feeling this way. But trying to deal with exam stress on your own can often make the stress worse. So it can really help to talk.

COPING WITH PRESSURE

Exams can feel like a lot of pressure. You might need certain grades for a course or job. Or your parents, carers or teachers might be putting pressure on you. You might be putting lots of pressure on yourself as well. No matter where the pressure is coming from, there are ways to help you cope:

- Think positively When we feel anxious, we can start thinking things like 'I can't do this' and 'I'm going to fail'. It can be difficult, but try to replace these with positive thoughts such as: 'this is just anxiety, it can't harm me' and, 'relax, concentrate it's going to be okay'.
- Be honest about how you feel Sometimes people can put pressure on you without even realising and sometimes it can help to talk about how it makes you feel. Talking about things can help you to think about other ways they can support you in the future. If you're worried about telling someone, you can always talk to us.
- Don't compare yourself to your friends Competing with your friends can help to keep you motivated. But it can also make you feel like you're not good enough, especially on - social media. Try keeping a list of the revision you've done so you can see how much you're achieving.

- Let your stress out Try using our Art box or the Mood Journal in your locker to describe how the pressure makes you feel. Or write a letter to someone you trust saying what's happening.

Pride Month: 1st-30th June 2025

Pride Month is a colourful and inclusive time to celebrate the LGBTQ+ community, recognising their history, contributions, and continued fight for equality. It's a chance to reflect on the values of acceptance, diversity, and love, while promoting a more inclusive society. Communities, organisations, and individuals come together during this month to show support and raise awareness for LGBTQ+ rights.

Oxford Pride 2025 - Saturday 7th June.

This year marks the 22nd anniversary of Oxford Pride, and it's set to be the biggest celebration yet! On Saturday 7th June, South Park will host The Greatest Show – a lively, circus-themed event filled with entertainment, community spirit, and inclusivity for all.

For more information about Oxford Pride and events happening across Oxfordshire, please visit: Oxford Pride UK.
